Six options for the Department to consider, on three parts of the website

A review of how people find schemes on dosje.gov.in and socialjustice.gov.in

THE REASON FOR THIS REVIEW

Why a Citizen Cannot Find a Scheme Today

The Schemes page has a Target Group filter. For each group the Department serves, this shows how many schemes are meant for them, and how many the filter can actually find.

32 to 5

Scheduled Castes

The Department's largest group. None of the five results is a scholarship.

23 to 0

Women and Girls

Twenty-three schemes are meant for them. The filter finds none of them.

The filter works. The information behind it was never filled in.

Only 2 of the 141 scheme records name more than one group; 27 name none at all.

Source: §1.3 of the review. Scheme records as on 13 June 2026; site behaviour checked on 20 August 2026. The counting method is generous, so the shortfall is at least this large.

WHAT IS BEING PLACED BEFORE YOU

Three Decisions. Six Options.

Each option is placed on a page of its own, with what it is, what a citizen does, what is in its favour, what is against it, and what the Department would have to do first. The three parts are decided separately.

The Home Page

THREE OPTIONS

Where most people arrive for the first time.

- A · Explore User Personas — on the site today
- B · Find Schemes for You — five questions
- C · Find Offerings for You — one tap

The Schemes Page

TWO OPTIONS

Where a person decides, and where officers and voluntary organisations work.

- A · Pictures of the nine groups, with cards
- B · Filter panel with a table of schemes

The Chatbot

ONE OPTION

Reachable from every page, including pages that lead nowhere else.

- A · Samajik Sahayak — the same five questions, in chat

Whichever options are chosen, the scheme records have to be tagged first. That work is set out on the page headed “What Has to Be Done First”.

Explore User Personas

ON THE SITE TODAY

The persona panel as it appears on the home page today, beside Recent Documents.

WHAT IT IS

A picture of one kind of person at a time, with arrows to move between them.

WHAT A CITIZEN DOES

Looks at the pictures, sees one that matches them, and taps through to the Schemes page.

ADVANTAGES

- Already on the page, so no extra space is needed
- Pictures help people who read slowly, or read another language
- Recognising yourself is easier than describing yourself

LIMITATIONS

- Only one group is shown at a time, behind arrows
- Sorts by group alone — not by age, need or State
- Today, choosing a group does not filter the Schemes page

WHAT THE DEPARTMENT MUST DO FIRST

Make the choice actually open the Schemes page already filtered. Until that is done, the panel leads nowhere useful.

OUR VIEW

Not recommended on its own. Keep it only if it is made to filter.

Find schemes for you

Five short questions. Skip any of them - skipping widens the answer instead of stopping it.

Next question →

Question 2 of 5. The number of schemes still matching is shown in the corner throughout.

WHAT IT IS

Five short questions, any of which may be skipped. Skipping widens the answer instead of stopping it.

WHAT A CITIZEN DOES

Answers up to five questions — who it is for, community, stage of life, kind of help and State — and is shown the schemes that fit, each with a place to apply.

ADVANTAGES

- Narrows 141 schemes down to the few that fit
- Reads stage of life, need and State, not only community
- No sign-in and no Aadhaar; nothing is stored
- A running count shows the citizen it is working as they answer
- Ends at a place to apply, not at a page of text

LIMITATIONS

- The scheme records must be tagged before it can work
- Needs space on the home page, unless it replaces Our Offerings
- The wording for caste categories needs Ministry approval

WHAT THE DEPARTMENT MUST DO FIRST

Tag all 141 scheme records — the same work every other option needs. Agree the wording for the community question.

OUR VIEW

Recommended for the home page. It answers the question a citizen actually has.

Design file: Mode 1 Website / Home page / Option B. This is recommendation R3 of the review.

Find Offerings for You

TO BE BUILT

Home page, Option C — Transgender Person selected, showing the three rows returned.

WHAT IT IS

A row of groups. Tapping one shows the portal, the scheme and the complaint route for that group.

WHAT A CITIZEN DOES

Taps the group that describes them and sees three things they can act on at once, without answering anything.

ADVANTAGES

- One tap, with no questions to answer
- Shows portals, schemes and complaint routes together
- Each row ends at Apply Now, on the card itself
- Puts the single-window promise on the home page itself
- Compact — one strip and three rows

LIMITATIONS

- The scheme records must be tagged before it can work
- Needs space on the home page, unless it replaces Our Offerings
- Less exact than five questions, because it reads group alone

WHAT THE DEPARTMENT MUST DO FIRST

Tag all 141 scheme records, and decide the three items shown for each group.

OUR VIEW

A good companion to Option B for people who will not answer questions. Not a replacement for it.

Pictures of the Nine Groups, with Cards

Cropped below the masthead and hero, and below the second row of cards.

WHAT IT IS

A row of pictures for the nine groups, above cards for each scheme.

WHAT A CITIZEN DOES

Picks their group from the pictures, then reads the scheme cards below.

ADVANTAGES

- All nine groups are visible at once, without arrows
- Pictures work across languages and reading levels
- Cards feel welcoming rather than administrative

LIMITATIONS

- Far fewer schemes fit on one screen
- No room to show who runs the scheme, or whether it is Central or State
- Two schemes cannot be compared side by side
- Nine illustrations to draw and to keep up to date

WHAT THE DEPARTMENT MUST DO FIRST

Tag all 141 scheme records, and commission nine illustrations.

OUR VIEW

Not recommended for this page. The pictures are welcoming, but this is the page where people compare.

Showing 10 of 19 items

Cropped below the masthead and hero. Two groups ticked, showing 19 schemes.

Design file: Mode 1 Website / Scheme / Option B. This is recommendation R5 of the review.

WHAT IT IS

Filters on the left; a table on the right showing what a person gets, who runs it, and whether it is Central or State.

WHAT A CITIZEN DOES

Ticks the groups that apply to them, and reads the schemes side by side to see which one to apply for.

ADVANTAGES

- Filters combine — group, stage of life and need can be ticked together
- Shows who runs each scheme, and whether it is Central or State
- Many more schemes are visible, and can be compared
- A count beside each filter warns before an empty result

LIMITATIONS

- A table reads as a record rather than an invitation
- Asks the citizen to use the site's own words
- Needs more care on a small screen

WHAT THE DEPARTMENT MUST DO FIRST

Tag all 141 scheme records, including who runs each one and whether it is Central or State.

OUR VIEW

Recommended for the Schemes page. Option A's pictures can sit above this panel if the Department wishes to keep them.

Samajik Sahayak — the Same Five Questions, in Chat

ON THE SITE TODAY

RECOMMENDED

Three of the six states drawn: the opening, the branch for an organisation, and the answer with schemes to open.

WHAT IT IS

The same five questions, asked one at a time in a chat window that is already built and reachable from every page.

WHAT A CITIZEN DOES

Opens the chat from whichever page they are on, answers the questions on their phone, and is given schemes to open.

ADVANTAGES

- Reachable from every page, including pages that lead nowhere else
- One question per screen suits a mobile phone
- Works in Hindi without a second design
- Already built — only the scheme branch is new
- States plainly that it cannot decide or change an application

LIMITATIONS

- A button in the corner is found only by those looking for it
- It covers the page on a small screen
- Harder to use with a screen reader

WHAT THE DEPARTMENT MUST DO FIRST

Tag all 141 scheme records, and ask the existing chatbot vendor to add the scheme branch.

OUR VIEW

Recommended, alongside whichever home page option is chosen. It reaches the person who is already lost on a page.

SEQUENCING

What Has to Be Done First

Every option above reads the same information about each scheme. Until that information is filled in, none of them can work — which is why the tagging comes before the design.

Stage 1 is the one piece only the Department can do. The Schemes page, the questions, the group pages and the chatbot all wait on it.

Source: §5 of the review. The times shown are estimates, not commitments.

FOR YOUR DECISION

Decisions Required

	THE DECISION	WHAT WE SUGGEST	WHO DECIDES
1	Which option for the home page	Option B — Find Schemes for You	Department of Social Justice & Empowerment
2	Which option for the Schemes page	Option B — filter panel with a table	Department of Social Justice & Empowerment
3	Whether the chatbot asks the same questions	Yes — it is already built	Department, with the existing chatbot vendor

And one approval sought: to begin Stage 1.

Filling in the information for all 141 schemes is the one piece of work every option above depends on. Whichever options are chosen, this has to begin first, and only the Department can do it.

Orders are sought before the Department's next review meeting.

What This Review Does Not Establish

1 No citizens were interviewed.

The findings come from examining the two websites and comparing them with myScheme, the disability department's site, the National Scholarship Portal and GOV.UK. The groups described are taken from the Department's own Acts, schemes and organisations, not from interviews. Before Stage 3 is built, the questions should be tested with people from those groups.

2 The scheme records are dated, and the counts are approximate.

The counts of 141 schemes come from records as on 13 June 2026. Everything said about the menus, the filters and the search was checked on the live sites on 20 August 2026. Schemes were matched to groups by looking for words in the title and text, which counts generously — so the shortfall shown is at least as large as stated, and probably larger.

WHAT WAS EXAMINED

The two Ministry websites

dosje.gov.in, marked BETA, and socialjustice.gov.in — read on 20 August 2026.

The Department's scheme records

141 schemes, 175 organisation pages, 1,624 documents, 305 tenders, 137 vacancies, as on 13 June 2026.

Other government websites

myscheme.gov.in · depwd.gov.in · scholarships.gov.in · GOV.UK, for comparison.

Standards applied

GIGW 3.0, DBIM 3.0 and WCAG 2.2 AA.
